BARCODE NEWS - SEPTEMBER 2008

NEW INDUSTRIAL BARCODE SCANNERS FROM DATALOGIC

Following the acquisition of PSC, Datalogic has announced the PowerScan 8300 family of corded and mobile industrial scanners.

These scanners form direct replacements for the Datalogic Dragon range and the PowerScan models from PSC.

The PowerScan 8300 family is based the on D8300 Desk and the M8300 Mobile industrial laser barcode scanners.

The PowerScan 8300 family is completely modular and able to handle a vast range of demanding industrial applications.

There are three models of the D8300 Desk. One with standard optics, another with long range optics and a third with an undecoded interface.

Eight models are available for the M8300 mobile. This reflects the choice of optics, the availability or otherwise of removable batteries and the optional inclusion of a screen in the hand-held unit.

To support the mobile models there is a range of base stations and battery chargers.

To connect the D8300 Desk, or the base stations associated with the M8300 mobile units, there is a huge array of cables already available and a new range of heavy duty industrial cables is being progressively introduced.

Add to this a useful range of holders, holsters, a vehicle mount kit and a hands-free stand and the product is thoroughly complete.

As a final point it is worth stressing that the new products are electrically and mechanically compatible with their Datalogic and PSC predecessors and there is even an adaptor available so that you can use old Dragon cables.
